Perfect!! Great quality and Fit

Reviewed by AZ Skier from Phoenix, AZ on Wednesday, August 28, 2013

I was looking for a replacement jacket for my Arcteryx Stingray. The Stingray is a little boxy for me and a bit short at the waist. I am almost 6'2" and about 205lb (ordered XL). I have been looking for a while now and I have found the perfect jacket. The Marmot Cerro Torre is awesome! GoreTex Pro,... Read More

Excellent outer layer

Verified Buyer Reviewed by Bis the traveller from Upstate New York on Wednesday, January 10, 2018

I bought this jacket as an outer layer to wear under my Patagonia down jacket, as a mid layer. I have booked a trip in Norway in February to see the Northern lights. I decided to try out my outfit in this recent Arctic spell in Upstate New York. This was the coldest day of the season so far with actual temperature -5F, with blustery winds and a wind chill of -22F. I live on top a hill and decided to try out my gear for a mile long walk. What a wonderful outer shell! I stayed warm, cozy, dry from the blustery winds and the blowing snow. The hood was perfect over my hat, hood and fit perfectly. I read the reviews elsewhere and this older version seems to be much better than the changed newer version. Thank you Sierra for the wonderful price and prompt shipping.

Gore-Tex Greatness

Verified Buyer Reviewed by Jake Cole from Boston on Sunday, January 7, 2018

Lives up to its billing! Just used it through the Jan 4-5 storm on the East coast and it perform perfectly. Impervious to wind this jacket kept me warm with a nice base and only a sweater as a midlayer. The hood worked well also. The cuffs were easy to manage and i was able to get various gloves over them, and a few others under. It's a bit noisy when moving as expected with Gore-Tex, but allowance for motion was great with free arm movements. Pockets worked well, very nice zippers. With this and my lighter shell, i'm all set for several years. STP didn't have a color selection, but the price you pay when shopping sales.

Great jacket, This is the original Cerro, not the new one

Reviewed by Noobski from Midwest on Wednesday, October 18, 2017

The Cerro Torre of a few years ago gets awesome reviews if you read online about it. The new Cerro gets poor reviews as a ski jacket given Marmot made a bunch of changes to the new jacket.

THIS IS THE ORIGINAL CERRO TORRE with all the awesome bells and whistles that the old reviews cheer about.

I had to return this great jacket for two reasons...I ordered a large because I tried the Storm King in Medium and it was too small. This was was a bit too large in Large I'm 6'1" 170 and this fit a bit baggy. I don't like baggy. The color was great though. Also, STP listed a bunch of different Arc Jackets right after I bought this one and the Arc's were simply better options for my needs...I ended up going with an Arc.

Like my Marmot Trident review, This jacket has everything you might be looking for a resort ski jacket: Goretex, pockets in perfect places, length to backside, and powderskirt. The helmet check passed with flying colors, no restrictions in movement when helmet was on and good face cover at full zip. It's too bad Marmot changed this jacket. If you're a Marmot brand fan like I am and want a great resort jacket, and want a Cerro Torre original model, this is probably the last chance you'll get other than STP.

great ski shell

Verified Buyer Reviewed by Eugene the semi active one from california on Monday, February 15, 2016

I finally had the chance to wear it while skiing, and it worked perfectly. Of course, it was super warm day, so it wasn't really tested. I liked the small pocket on the sleeve. I used it to hold my day pass. The chest pocket was big enough for my big phone. The hand pockets worked well to carry my gloves and other miscellaneous items. I only had a short sleeve shirt underneath, and I wasn't cold. The jacket kept out the wind really well.

Awesome in greenVerified Buyer Reviewed by Matthew from Wyoming on Friday, February 5, 2016

I love this thing. I have been out several times in high winds and below zero. Great wind block and very little needed for extra layers under it. Great fit. Love the quality of the zipper, I have had to many other jackets lately where the zippers don't function properly most of the time and split out from the bottom.

About Marmot

Conceived in a university dorm room by a pair of climbing buddies, Marmot Mountain Works first opened its doors in the spring of 1974 in Grand Junction, Colorado. At the time, the base of operations was a 100-year-old stone building. That same year, the first Marmot down jacket was produced specifically for an action flick called "The Eiger Sanction," starring legendary actor Clint Eastwood. In the four decades since, Marmot has continued to engineer reliable gear that exceeds the expectations of outdoor athletes. Today, Marmot tents, backpacks, outerwear, clothing and Marmot sleeping bags are still pushing the limits in the planet's most challenging conditions, from the summits of the world's highest mountains to the deepest river basins.
